Fans Try To Jam Into A Miami Concert

Approximately 60 additional police officers were called to a Pearl Jam concert in Miami when more than 10,000 people showed up to a sold out show at the 8,000-capacity AT&T Amphitheatre at Bayfront Park March 28th. Some fans tried to rush the chain-link fence surrounding the amphitheatre and a few fans resorted to hurling bottles and rocks. There were 16 arrests for various offenses including disorderly conduct, possession of marijuana and assault on a police officer. A spokesperson for the Miami police force said, contrary to reports of riotous behavior, the majority of fans just wanted to sit outside the gates and hear the music, which they were allowed to do once the unruly fans were arrested. Several sections of the venue's fencing were damaged and a few small trees were uprooted. Police reported no serious injuries and freely admitted that initial press reports about there being a major riot were greatly exaggerated.

Could Bobcat Be The Rolaids Rustler?

Bobcat Goldthwait was detained by police after a clerk in a Sioux City, Iowa grocery store accused him of shoplifting a pack of Rolaids. "When the clerk said she wanted to search my pockets, I told her I would rather have dinner and drinks first," Goldthwait said. "Needless to say, that didn't get a smile out of her and she called the cops." Bobcat was released after police searched him and found nothing. "When I snap and start robbing things, it's not going to be Rolaids," he said. "I'm going for the big bucks." Employees of the Cub Food market apologized to Bobcat after the March 24th incident, but complained he was verbally abusive. "Compared to my act, I thought I was letting her off kind of easy," Bobcat said. Actually, the whole incident was immediately incorporated into his act for the show he later did at Wayne State College in Nebraska.

Spoleto Festival Expands Musical Genres

The Spoleto Festival U.S.A., which traditionally features operas, classical concerts, chorus performances and chamber music, is expanding its program to include country, jazz and rock in its first year without its founder. Composer Gian Carlo Menotti, who started Spoleto in 1977 as a sister festival to the one he founded in Italy in 1958, left Spoleto U.S.A. last year over a money dispute with the festival board. Menotti also had objected to adding jazz performances for the Columbia, S.C., festival's 18th season. In addition to the traditional classical music forms, Spoleto's May 25th through June 5th run will feature performances by Rosanne Cash and Cassandra Wilson. It will also highlight the music of the late Frank Zappa. Festival organizers say they need to raise about $1.7 million during the next two months. Those funds will not only contribute to this season's expenses, but will also cover a $600,000 deficit from last season. Festival officials approved a revised budget of $4.2 million March 25th, which is $200,000 more than the previously approved budget. Organizers hope the contemporary music bookings will help offset the costs of the money-losing operas.

SHERYL CROW

As Sheryl Crow prepared for her first appearance on David Letterman's show March 21st, the Missouri-bred songwriter spoke to POLLSTAR about something many musicians preparing for the "Late Show" seem to hope for: being called over to the panel to talk with Letterman. "I'll be anxious to see whether he puts me on the panel or not," Crow said. "I'm really looking forward to it, because I love Dave." Crow lucked out that night. Her performance was beautiful and Letterman did indeed call her over to chat. "I'll tell you what, I'm the luckiest girl in the world. Everything has fallen together [with] sweet little things all over the place. The Letterman thing is just icing on the cake." And if Crow needs any extra icing, the fact that Letterman has already asked her back to the show should do the trick.

Crow, who began playing piano and writing songs when she was a very young girl, is a classically trained and educated musician who worked as an elementary school teacher until she decided to relocate to Los Angeles six years ago. Crow had taken a teaching job in St. Louis because she was engaged to the guitar player in her band at the time. "About two or three months into it, he announced [that] if I was going to be in bands the rest of my life, being married wasn't going to work out." At that point, Crow realized she did want to be a musician for the rest of her life, so she finished her teaching contract and moved to Los Angeles. Without knowing a soul in L.A., it took Crow only six months to land a gig as a backup singer for Michael Jackson's "Bad" tour.

Crow overheard some singers at a session talking about Jackson looking for a female backup singer to go on the road with him. So she found out where the audition was, "And I got it," Crow said. "It completely changed my life. I'd hardly even been out of the state of Missouri, let alone the United States. And we toured all over the world. And because of the exposure of it, I got a lot of work as a background singer."

Crow said being on the road with Jackson was a crash course in the music industry. "A month after I did the audition, I walked out on stage in front of 75,000 people. It definitely was one of the most fantastic experiences I've ever had. Working with Michael was pretty unbelievable because he's so huge — he's a household name in Third World countries. I don't think I'll ever work for anybody that's [more famous] than that — unless the Beatles got back together."

Following the tour, Crow got the opportunity to work as a backup singer and a session musician with many artists, including Stevie Wonder, Rod Stewart and Don Henley. She was in the house band for Bob Dylan's 30th anniversary tribute concert. She also played keyboards with Sinéad O'Connor that night, which was the night O'Connor was booed off the stage because she had torn up the picture of the pope on "Saturday Night Live." "The whole evening was just amazing. And as far as the Sinéad thing goes...I honestly felt the audience was not there to [condemn her]. They didn't initially start booing when we walked out. They were clapping and they were very supportive of her, and I think she stood there long enough to turn that into venom. And I thought it was really unfortunate, 'cause the evening was a tribute to Bob Dylan and [it] seemed like a strange place to bring your politics. But then again, I guess that's what Bob stands for."

Despite the superb experiences and all the resulting benefits to her career, Crow felt that being a backup singer was ruining her credibility as a solo performer — even though her work as a songwriter was being recognized. Her songs had been recorded by Eric Clapton and Wynonna, among others. "I started watching my own songs go out the door to other artists. At one point Don Henley came to me and said, 'You write really good songs, nobody does them better than you, and people are starting to see you as a background singer. So you should start turning down work,' which is exactly what I did."

However, her debut release on A&M Records, Tuesday Night Music Club, did not come out of a deliberate attempt to get a solo record deal. Producer Bill Bottrell, who has worked with Madonna and Tom Petty, among others, asked Crow to join in some jam sessions he was hosting. "All these people that were involved have their own careers and their own record deals. [There were] a couple of guys from Wire Train, Kevin Gilbert from Toy Matinee, Dan Schwartz who plays with Brian Eno, and then David [Baerwald] and Bill. And David Ricketts was there a couple of times [also]. It was merely [used] as an outlet because none of us had found any sort of musical community in L.A." Meanwhile, veteran producer Hugh Padgham had asked Crow if he could take one of her tapes to A&M. A&M called her the very next day. So she asked the Tuesday Night Music Club to participate on her solo record, and they agreed.

But what is most important to Crow is having a record that she can tour behind. "Even though the record has been reviewed very favorably, the live show's been my baby. The reviews from the last shows have been really good, and for me, that's really the only thing I care about." She finally got rid of her apartment in St. Louis and now calls her big pink tour bus home. And she takes her Labrador, Scout, with her wherever she goes. "It's nice because I've not really felt like I've had a home in the last six years. So it seems to be, wherever he is, that's my home." Crow is currently supporting Crowded House, and will follow that with solo dates in Europe. Plans for the summer are tenuous, but either a club tour or a support slot on a major bill can be expected. "If the Stones called, I'd have to say yes," Crow said with ambition and humor in her voice. John Marx at the William Morris Agency is responsible for booking her live dates, and handling the personal management duties is Stephen "Scooter" Weintraub in New York.

sales tax to help raise money to develop a sports park; the power to levy a property tax and special assessments; and the right to condemn property and contract with local governments for police and fire protection. A House committee already has rejected granting taxing authority for the district, but supporters will try to restore the plan before another committee this week. Blockbuster officials are trying to convince the legislature that the complex would be an economic boon for the state, creating 20,000 jobs and $1.2 billion in annual revenue. Some in the legislature are concerned that Blockbuster would be given too much taxing power under the company's proposal. Plans for the complex include a stadium for the company's Florida Marlins baseball team, an arena for its Florida Panthers hockey team, a 36-hole golf course, and other sports and entertainment facilities.

Jimmy Buffett Gets Punched Out

Jimmy Buffett got to play a one-armed heckler who gets punched out by baseball great Ty Cobb — played by Tommy Lee Jones — in the movie "Cobb." Tom Todoroff, the film's associate producer, thought Buffett should play the heckler because "in the early days, when he was playing clubs, he was really heckled." In Buffett's scene, Cobb responds to the abuse by climbing into the stands and beating up his tormentor. Buffett and harmonica player Greg "Fingers" Taylor also were useful when it came to filling the stands at Rickwood Field in Birmingham, Ala., where the scenes were shot on March 27th because they agreed to give a concert once shooting was finished for the day.

South By Southwest A Hit

More than 500 bands and nearly 4,000 registered participants gathered in Austin, Texas March 16th for the eighth annual South By Southwest music and media conference. Eight years ago SXSW was designed as a regional confab, drawing mainly upon Austin bands. This year almost 3,200 musical acts from around the world submitted applications for showcases, with hopes of a shot at getting the attention of a record exec, agent, manager, promoter, club owner or music journalist. The vast majority of the acts which showcased at SXSW's 28 different venues were unsigned, but a few better known acts also participated, including Mojo Nixon, Jello Biafra, Cracker, Rodney Crowell, Sam Phillips, Radney Foster and Johnny Cash, who reportedly was the biggest hit of the conference. The daytime panel discussions were as varied as the performers, touching on a plethora of topics such as: Keeping Your Artists and Keeping Them Happy; Interactive Media; Musical Day Jobs for Working Musicians; A&R Methodologies; Junkie in the Band; Criticizing the Scene; Corruption — A Tradition; and Avoiding Bad Press. All in all, SXSW was a major success and is now clearly one of the most popular A&R oriented conferences in the music industry.

Family Honors, Boy Toys, & Sexual Orientations

In Michael Jackson news, financial troubles with the "Jackson Family Honors" surfaced, ex-security guards filed a new suit against MJ, and the grand jury in Santa Barbara is reportedly questioning witnesses about MJ's sexual orientation. It had been estimated that the "Jackson Family Honors," which was filmed at the MGM Grand Hotel in Las Vegas in February, would bring in $6 million for various charities. But when allegations of sexual molestation on MJ's part surfaced in August, the concert lost nearly $4 million in sponsorships, according to Jackson family spokesperson John McLaughlin. And when reports emerged that MJ might not appear or perform at the concert, ticket prices were slashed. Ticketmaster has reportedly frozen nearly $500,000 in proceeds following refund demands from customers who paid $350 for a ticket but found the person next to them had paid only $50. And the MGM has frozen $400,000 in box office receipts following similar complaints, as well as reports of unpaid room service charges and labor costs. Though the concert grossed $4.5 million, the producer of the NBC televised special said he has only received partial payment of his $400,000 fee. Executive producer Jermaine Jackson acknowledged the financial difficulties but promised that everyone would eventually get paid. And $100,000 will be divided between a variety of charities. Plaguing MJ personally, five ex-security guards who had filed a wrongful termination suit against him last November amended their suit March 24th, adding allegations that MJ used young boys as "sex toys" and that his staff made payoffs to the boys and their families to keep them silent. "Driven by his perverted passion, he openly travelled with young boys, had them delivered to him in limousines and boldly kept young boys in his bedroom as virtual sex toys for days at a time," the civil lawsuit stated. The amendment was in response to a judge's order to provide further backing for their wrongful termination suit. And in Santa Barbara, an employee of MJ's was questioned by the grand jury about MJ's sexual orientation, the sexual orientation of MJ's acquaintances and the sexual orientation of the witness, according to the Los Angeles Times. Reportedly, the witness' lawyer wrote an angry letter to the Santa Barbara County and Los Angeles County district attorneys' offices complaining that prosecutors exceeded the proper limits of grand jury questioning. Several experienced lawyers reportedly said they considered it highly unusual for prosecutors to inquire about a witness' sexual orientation. But other legal experts claim that the grand jury has more powers than the police or prosecutors and that the grand jury can ask generally what ever it wants. However, several attorneys reportedly agree that asking about the witness' sexual orientation was getting "close to the edge" of what is acceptable. No criminal charges have been brought against MJ, and word now is that the investigations won't conclude until late April.

Beastie Boy Faces Felony Charge — By Choice

A lawyer for Beastie Boy Adam Horovitz took the unusual step of asking that his client be charged with a felony rather than a misdemeanor for allegedly beating a "Hard Copy" video cameraman and stealing his tape outside a memorial for River Phoenix. "I requested it so I will be dealing with a more professional and sensible group of lawyers," attorney Howard Price said. "I didn't want to deal with the city attorney I was dealing with. He was foolish. It's not a serious case." Horovitz surrendered March 23rd and was then released. An April 20th arraignment has been set. Horovitz allegedly confronted the cameraman outside a memorial service for Phoenix at Horovitz' home in November. The cameraman said he was beaten after he refused to give Horovitz the tape of people arriving for the service. The felony grand theft charge carries a maximum three-year prison sentence and the misdemeanor battery count could get Horovitz six months in the crowbar hotel and a $2,000 fine.

A Positive Rap

Some of hip-hop's top acts contributed tracks to a charity album spearheaded by Los Angeles radio station KPWR-FM which hit the streets in January. Tupac Shakur, Dr. Dre, Ice Cube, Sir-Mix-A-Lot and Tag Team are among the acts that contributed hit songs to the compilation. The station's "Knowledge Is Power Fund" will get 90 percent of the revenues from the album to build a performing arts center for inner-city kids near the Greek Theatre in Los Angeles. The center will teach students skills needed to land work in the entertainment industry. The album — only available in Southern California — sold 8,200 copies its first week and has been selling about 4,000 copies a week since then, according to KPWR assistant PD Michelle Mercer. For every CD sold at $13.99, $12.90 goes to the fund. Meanwhile, the nominations are out for the Source Awards, the first all-rap awards show. The Source magazine created the awards show, dedicated to "hip-hop music, culture and politics," after perceiving a lack of respect for the music from mainstream awards shows. Winners will be honored on April 24th at The Paramount in NYC. Leading the way was Onyx, which picked up five nominations. De La Soul, Run DMC, 2 Pac, Dr. Dre, Wu-Tang Clan and Ice Cube picked up three nominations each.

Between The Dates

The phone lines were sizzling last week as approximately 250,000 tickets were sold for an estimated $45 million gross for the upcoming BARBRA STREISAND tour. Tickets, which were available both over the phone and at Ticketmaster outlets, went up at high noon EST on Sunday, March 27th for 12 shows in five markets. All shows sold out within minutes, prompting some additional shows - one for Detroit, three for Anaheim, and two for New York to also be added and quickly sold out. Ticketmaster prexy Fred Rosen estimated that 5 million call attempts were made to Ticketmaster phone lines within the first hour. In New York, fans started lining up Friday night and Sunday morning found close to 1,000 people wearing pink, blue and white bracelets bearing their number in the line. By dawn on Sunday, 5,000 hopeful fans reportedly had flocked to the Anaheim Arena. Streisand's manager, Martin Erlichman, had originally set the limit at six tickets per customer, but as sales began, reduced the limit to four and finally two per customer. As with the first 12 shows, portions of the ticket sales from the six additional concerts will benefit various Streisand-approved charities. For the June 23rd New York show, Streisand made available 800 choice seats at $1000 per ticket with $650 per ticket going to one of her favorite charities, the Environmental Defense Fund..... Chrissie Hynde is in London rehearsing for the first PRETENDERS tour in eight years. Joining the only other surviving band member, drummer Martin Chambers, will be former Primitives bass player Andy Hobson and guitarist Adam Semour, formerly of the Katydids. Hobson and Semour replace Pete Farndon and James Honeyman-Scott, both of whom died of drug overdoses in the '80s. Sire vice-president Howie Klein said that several major radio stations want the group for their summer festivals. They're already set to play for Live-105 at the Shoreline Amphitheatre on June 10th and for KROQ-FM at the Irvine Meadows Amphitheatre on June 11th..... With all the '70s legends coming back to the concert stage, can pet rocks and mood rings be far behind? You can add two more acts to the list that already includes Traffic, Pink Floyd, Eagles, and Steely Dan. Watch for San Francisco favorites THE DOOBIE BROTHERS to co-headline with FOREIGNER in July and August. Dates are forthcoming..... Retirement didn't work for Sinatra and it doesn't seem to be setting too well with OZZY OSBOURNE either. The mighty Oz is now looking for a new guitarist, bassist, and drummer for his band, and is planning on touring at the end of this year. By the time Osbourne decided to tour, his former bandmates had reportedly already gone on to other projects.
